Many "June Buds" and Policemen Summoned as Witnesses for To-Day's Session.

Half a dozen bluecoats, among whom was Ward Man George Sheridan, of the Church street station, occupied seats this morning in the witness pen in Part of the Superior Court, when the Lexow Police Investigating Committee resumed operations.

Sheridan was tried not long ago before Police Commissioners for clubbing J. J. Lynch and one or two other Jerse City men, in an alleged pool room in the Merchants' Hotel, at Corllandt and West streets. Decision in his case is still pending. It was charged that he protected the pool room.

There was also another instalment of gentle June bugs from the Tenderloin, St. Nicholas Bank, spoken of yesterday by the plaintiff's counsel as an adverse by the plaintiff's counsel as a who were ushered into the court-room a detachment of detectives from the Parkhurst society. One of them was a very pretty blue-eyed young woman, in a dark blue gown, wearing a stylish hat with a silk veil drawn tightly over her effect that the St. Nicholas Bank would face. Two of the women were said to discontinue to clear for the Madison be from the Eleventh Precinct, and the Square Bank on and after Aug. 9, 1883, contrast was striking. They all carried he had no idea that the Madison Square

"I don't know."

"Not any more than any other docks, so far as I know.

"This finished Mr. Earle's testimony, and as Judge Ransom wanted to ask no questions Jameu D'Olyer was called as the next witness.

Mr. D'Olyer said he was private secretary for H. Mailland Kersey, agent of the White Star line. He said the Company had police officers on each one of their piers. Those policemen were members of the Steamboat squad.

They also stayed late hours when requested to do so, to watch for incoming steamers, to protect steerage passengers and to be on hand for early sallings.

"Are these men paid for this work?"

"Yes, sir; they are paid every week. The man on pier 45 gets $10, and the one on pier 38, $5 a week."

"Who are these officers?"

"The man on pier 46 is O'Neill and on pier 38, Bradshaw."

Both the officers were in court and were identified by Mr. D'Olyer, who said that the $10 weekly had been paid regularly for the last ten years. This was for the passenger pier and the other was the freight pier.

Get Money, but No Dinners.

These payments were entered in the book as "extra watchmen," and the money was paid by Dock Superintendent Pennell every week. The witness did not think the police officers ever got passes from the Company, nor did they ever get dinners aboard the ship. All the work they were paid for was for something that was done outside the officer's regular duties as policeman.

"As a matter of fact, you pay these men because they are policemen and wear a uniform?"

"Yes, that is about it."

Robert P. Reilly, superintendent of the Spanish Transatiantic Steamship line, at pier 10, North River, the next witness, said that Policeman William Connolly, of the steamboat squad, was employed for extra time by his Company to look out for the trucks and passengers when the steamers came in and went out.
